Khoshkam comes home to guide Shakespeare festival

By Joanne Paulson

Kayvon Khoshkam knew he needed a change, but running a theatre festival was not among the ideas being entertained by the Vancouver-based actor, producer and director..

Yet here he is, the new artistic director of Shakespeare on the Saskatchewan. And he’s come home.

Exactly 20 years ago, Khoshkam left

Saskatoon to find his niche in the artistic world. At the time, he was focused on his guitar, not the theatre scene.

However, the graduate of the Canadian College of Performing Arts ended up becoming an actor, a playwright, the founder of the Pull Festival of 10-minute plays in Vancouver, and artistic director of the SpeakEasy Theatre. He has also been touring a lot.
